ON MARCH NINTH SENATE WILL VOTE ON STATEHOOD

Washington, Feb. 28.—The senate yesterday decided on Friday, March 9, as the date for voting on the statehood bill and all its amendments. Senator Foraker, of Ohio, who is in lead of the opposition to the omnibus statehood bill, stated that he had a small majority for his amendment to the bill which permits the people of Arizona and New Mexico to vote as to the kind of statehood they want. He claims the solid support of the democratic senators with the exception of one senator from Arkansas, and six republicans.

Friends of the administration, without giving their names, assert that three of the senators claimed by Foraker and who were formerly counted as his supporters have voluntarily advised Senator Dick that since listening to his speech they have decided to line up for the omnibus bill.

"Say for me," said Senator Beveridge, "that we are going to make a state out of Oklahoma and the Indian Territory a week from Friday. I see no cause for the

NEW BILLS CONCERNING

THE CHICKASAW NATION

Washington, Feb. 23.—Delegate McGuire has introduced and had referred to the house Indian affairs committee a bill authorizing the governor of the Chickasaw Nation and the principal chief of the Choctaw Nation to execute and deliver to the Murrow Indian Orphans' home, a corporation at Atoka, I. T., certificates and patents for certain lots of lands for the uses and purposes of said home.

He also introduced and had referred to the house judiciary committee an act establishing a United States court at Sulphur, I. T.

Delegate McGuire introduced a bill changing the corporation limits of Duncan, Chickasaw Nation, to conform to its exterior limits as segregated and approved by Secretary Hitchcock, March 4, 1902.

Washington, Feb. 28.—After the agreement yesterday to vote on the statehood bill on March 9 the Indian settlement bill was taken up in the senate and Mr. Aldrich suggested that in view of the importance of the subject involved and the lack of information on the part of the senate, the whole matter should be deferred. He urged the adoption of the resolution, but Mr. Spooner objected and it went over until tomorrow.

The reading of the bill was proceeded with until the provision for the sale of the coal land in Indian Territory was reached, when Mr. Bailey took the floor. He expressed the opinion that the land should be held for the education of the Indian children, saying the income would be sufficient to give a university education to all the Indian children in the territory.

He thought this disposition would be preferable to permitting the lands to become the property of the railroad companies as they were likely to do. He quoted a recent decision of the supreme court to show that the roads carry their own coal more cheaply than they do those of other shippers.

Mr. Clark, (Mont.) moved to re- lieve the committee amendment, and Mr. La Follette proposed an amendment prohibiting railroads or the owners of railroad stock from acquiring the coal lands.

Mr. La Follette expressed the hope that Mr. Clark's motion would not prevail, and added the conviction that there were conditions in Indian Territory that should require affirmative legislation. He announced his intention to later address the senate on the subject.

Mr. Clark spoke in support of his motion. He said if sold the lands would not bring their value and that the sale would afford opportunity for all kinds of commissions to gobble up the lands.

Without disposing of any of the motions or amendments the senate went into executive session and at 5:37 o'clock adjourned.

Stop Sales of Cider.

South McAlester, I. T., Feb. 28.—Pursuant to an order received from the Attorney General that the sale of all substitutes for intoxicating liquors be stopped. Marshal Pritchard last night began war against the cider joints.

The cider sold is usually a mixture made from acids and spiked with something hot and is a great favorite with the Indians when the genuine medicine cannot be obtained.

FLATTERING SHOWING FOR TERRITORIES' LIVESTOCK

Guthrie, Ok., Feb. 27.—Figures have been arranged in the office of G. A. McNabb, secretary of the Oklahoma Board of Agriculture, in regard to the number of live stock in the two territories and the comparative values. In connection with these figures it is an interesting fact that there are only fifteen states in the Union that have a greater number of horses now within their border than Oklahoma.

In Oklahoma there are 412,772 horses, 87,373 mules, 192,332 milk cows, 1,387,161 other cattle, 57,240 sheep and 595,612 swine, making the total number of live animals in Oklahoma 2,731,480.

In Indian Territory there are 213,234 horses, 53,648 mules, 109,360 milk cows, 475,093 other cattle, 28,419 sheep and 751,352 swine, a total of 1,626,106.

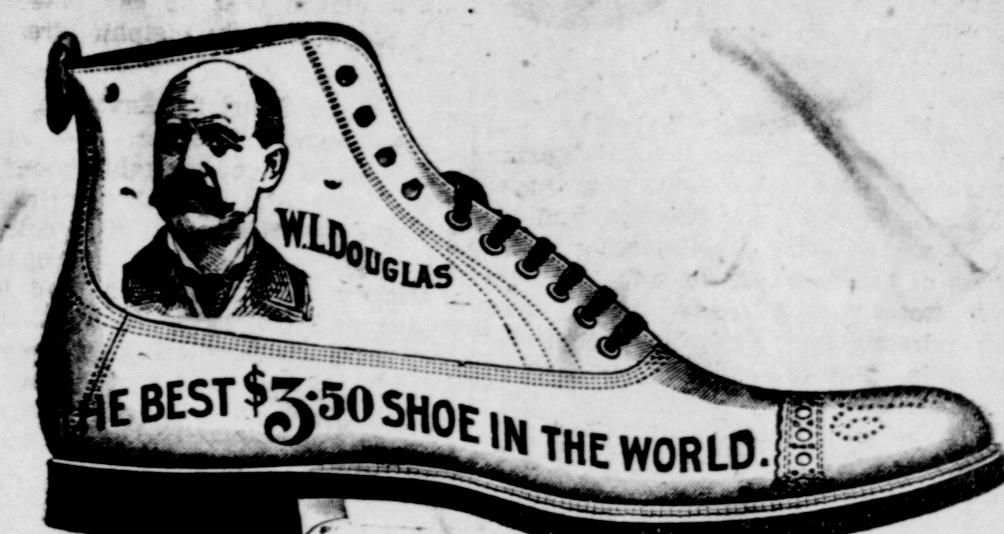

The total value of the live stock in Indian Territory is $28,456,878 and in Oklahoma $63,163,788.

NEGRO'S BRUTAL ACT PRECIPITATES RACE RIOT

Springfield, Ohio, Feb. 28.—As the result of a shooting in the railroad yards yesterday in which M. M. Davis, a brakeman, was perhaps fatally wounded by two negroes, a general riot in "The Jungles," a locality inhabited by negroes, has resulted in the burning of a number of houses by mob of 1,000 persons, against which the police are helpless and troops have been called for and are endeavoring to stop the trouble. A looted saloon afforded the results of intoxication, and a number of shots have been fired. A general fire alarm has added to

PHONOGRAHS IN SCIENCE.

Talking Machine Records of Languages for Future Generations.

One of the oddest collections in the British museum is a set of talking machine records of the voices of prominent persons of the present. They are not offered for general inspection, but a hundred years hence the historian may describe to his readers how Queen Victoria's voice sounded to him, as well as the voices of the other members of the royal family and the leading statesmen of to-day. In all there are already filed away more than 500 records. The collection is being added to constantly.

The Vienna Academy of Sciences already possesses a collection of several thousand records of dialects and languages. They include the songs of the American Indian and the war chant of the Malay. Idioms and peculiarities are also recorded, and the collection will not be regarded as complete until every race and division of race has contributed to the collection.

In addition to their value in the future, they are being used for a comparative study of language. Arrangements are now being made to record the cries of animals and a large staff of voice hunters are kept constantly employed in these two branches.

Expanding Industry in the South. In the race for wealth the southern farmer is abreast of the western granger and the northern manufacturer. He is no longer hampered by poverty and a tradition. From all over the south come reports of expanding industries. It is computed that farm properties in the 11 states that once seceded from the union have risen in value more than $1,000,000,000 in these years. The average yield of these lands since this century began is $100.

Sago Gruel for Invalids. Two cups of water, two tablespoonfuls of sago, one tablespoonful of lemon juice and a pinch of salt. Put the sago in the water while cold, and warm by setting in a saucepan of boiling water. Stir often, and let it soften and heat for one hour. Then boil ten minutes, stirring all the time; add the sugar, wine and lemon, and pour into a bowl or mold to cool. Eat warm, if preferred.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Clearing for Action. The importance of removing all unnecessary objects from the decks of men-of-war was emphasized on board the Japanese Mikasa, on which 23 men were killed or wounded by the fragments of an optic telegraph that had been hit by a bomb.

Up-to-Date Monks. The monks of the St. Bernard hospice in Switzerland are bound to be up to date. They have purchased an automobile to carry provisions up the mountain. In order not to frighten teams they had a horse hitched to the motor wagon. The government's permission had to be obtained, because of the bridges, some of which were not intended for such heavy loads.

ROOSEVELT'S DUDE OUTFIT

Young Fellows from New York Who Didn't Take with the Cowboys.

"It was in 1885 that I first saw Roosevelt," says H. W. Otis, of Peoria, Ill., in Success Magazine. "That was the year he established his ranch in the Bad Lands of Dakota and Nebraska. Had I known that young fellow was booked for the presidency of the United States I certainly would have cultivated his acquaintance more than I did.

"The most conspicuous parts of him then, as now, were his glasses and his big teeth. I remember his advent into camp and his initiation as a cow-puncher. It is always the custom to get, for the tenderfoot to ride the worst broncho obtainable. Roosevelt, on getting astride the wild horse, was mighty soon dumped off. He was thrown time and time again, but persisted until he succeeded in breaking the animal to ride, and when he came back to camp he let out a war whoop worthy of a true buckaroo. That experience gained for him the respect of the older cowboys, who looked with haughty disdain upon a tenderfoot.

"There were five or six young fellows from New York with Roosevelt, and we called them the 'duke outfit.' I have no doubt President Roosevelt well remembers an incident which occurred in camp one day on the roundup. We had in our gang a wild, reckless fellow named Bill Jones. Bill had killed another man's dog. One of the New Yorkers said: 'I'd like to see that Bill Jones kill a dog of mine.' 'Well,' said Bill, who chanced to hear the remark, 'you just play for a few minutes that it was your dog that Bill Jones killed.' The young New Yorker concluded that he did not care to have anything to do with supposititious cases—at least he remained in the tent."

NOT THE PROPER SPIRIT.

Customer in Jeweler's Was Not Endowed with the Christmas Feeling.

"It isn't the presents—it's the spirit," said January Jones, the millionaire miner of Goldfields, apropos of Christmas.

"I was in a bric-a-brac shop last January, and something that took place there showed me that with too many of us the Christmas spirit is not the proper one.

"I was talking to the proprietor. One of the clerks stepped up excitedly, his eyes beaming with the hope of a big sale.

"'Say, boss,' he whispered, 'give me the key to the safe. There's a lady wants a solitaire just like the one she has on. She thinks it will be fun to have two rings alike.'

"The proprietor did not bring forth the key. He only shook his head and said sadly:

"Don't waste any time on her. The ring she has on is a Christmas present, and she only wants to find out what it cost."

DEVOTION DEMANDED.

Visiting Beaux Must Depart Early or Join in Family Prayer.

A Presbyterian clergyman of this city with two popular daughters has discovered a new way to end the visits of their beaux at a seemly hour—a plan which might appeal to lay families as well, says the Philadelphia Record.

For a number of years it has been a custom of this good man to hold evening worship after supper, always concluding the prayers with a short discourse. Things went very well until the daughters began to receive the attentions of young men, and begged off or stole away to make their evening toilets. Then the minister changed the devotional hour until ten in the evening.

This reform created an upheaval, but the father insisted, and at the stroke of ten the visiting young men are now left two alternatives: "Either to leave or join with the family in prayer, and it has proved a severe test of their devotion for the daughters when those not prayerfully inclined stick it out, sermon and all."

SPORT AND ADVENTURE

EXPLORING THE GREAT ATLAS

FATE similar to that which befell Mr. Perdier's last year has recently overtaken a French explorer who endeavored to map the sources and the courses of the streams which flow from the Great Atlas Mountains, in Morocco, to the Atlantic and the Mediterranean. Monsieur De Segonzac has been captured by unruly Arabs and is being held for ransom.

The work which he had undertaken, and on which he had made great progress, was the filling in with exact details of one of the largest blanks on the map of Africa. Although several explorers have been through that region, little is known of the origin of the waters which come from it, of possible passes through the mountains, or more than a bare outline of the range itself. At the instigation of the French African committee Monsieur De Segonzac went thither last November, accompanied by Professor Gentil, a geologist of the Sorbonne; Monsieur De Flotte-Roquevaire, a cartographer, a Berber and an Arab interpreter. They landed at Mogador, on the Atlantic coast, and there found it necessary to separate at once, in order not to attract too much attention. While the other two Frenchmen devoted themselves to the country round the City of Morocco, Monsieur De Segonzac set out for Grand Atlas.

From the first the progress was difficult. He found it necessary to conceal the fact that he was a Christian, yet this was unavoidably known to his escort, and the latter made his knowledge of the fact the ground for insolence and constantly increasing demands.

"Possession of my secret has made my servants my masters," the explorer wrote back in February.

The sheriffs of that region govern with very little regard to the Sultan of Morocco, and maintain their authority in indefinitely bounded districts in a sort of feudal barony, robbing or protecting travelers as they choose. With some of them Monsieur De Segonzac became very friendly, visiting at their villages and traveling under their protection. Others were jealous of his intrusion, and made open threats of violence against him. Nevertheless, he made his way up the northwesterly side of the Great Atlas to the Wady el Abid, and advanced up that valley, carefully determining the location of his camp by stellar observation every night, mapping his progress, and sending back notes geographical, geological and sociological as often as he could find trustworthy bearers.

He found at the head of the Wady el Abid a hitherto unknown pass of easy access through the chain to the head of the Wady Muluya. Passing through this, he saw at last the snow-clad summit of the wonderful Jebel Ayashi, the highest peak of the Atlas, fourteen thousand six hundred feet above the sea. To this he had penetrated on an earlier trip from the other direction, so he turned southward again and worked from the Muluya round to the Wady Sis and the Gheris, aiming toward Tafilet.

All of this way his notes were most complete, and he had entered into relations with many of the local sheriffs, which, he believed, would enable France to treat with them directly later for purposes of trade. At last, however, he was betrayed as a Christian to one of the under-sheriffs, who evidently saw in him a good investment, seized him and carried him into captivity.

The Berber interpreter, whose connection with the affair is not entirely plain, revealed the state of affairs to the French African committee in a letter, in which they are assured that Monsieur De Segonzac is in good health, and if ransomed within a reasonable time will receive every courtesy. The other members of his party are quite safe at Morocco.

SAVED THEIR SCALPS.

Modern methods of locomotion offer many risks, but at least the traveler of to-day does not know what it is to journey in dread of the tomahawk. The danger of a misplaced switch cannot present itself with such insistent horror as did the ever-present possibility of the lurking enemy of the forest. The Magazine of American History gives an account of a thrilling experience which occurred in 1779.

In the fall of that year about seventy men, in two large boats, endeavored to make their way up the Mississippi from New Orleans toward Fort Pitt with stores of provisions. At the mouth of the Little Miami the Indians attacked them. The white men noiselessly landed and tried to elude the enemy, but the savages seemed to spring out of the very ground. Nearly all the party were killed, although a few escaped into the forest.

During the slaughter Captain Benham, second in command, fell, pierced by a bullet. Although he felt confident his scalp was doomed, he lay perfectly still, putting off the evil moment as long as possible. In their eager pursuit the Indians passed him by. When he was sure they had gone, the captain painfully raised his head to see if he could better his hiding, for he knew the savages would be back for him. Near by was a newly fallen tree with unwithered foliage. With much anguish the wounded man managed to crawl into this shelter.

The next day, according to their custom, the Indians returned to strip and scalp their victims. The captain lay, expecting every moment to feel the cold edge of the tomahawk. The prospect of death by slow starvation did not seem half so terrible as that at the Indians' hands. When the savages had accomplished their task, they went off, leaving Benham undiscovered.

The captain's chance of life was poor. He had nothing to eat, nothing to drink, and the slightest movement caused him excruciating pain from his wound. On the evening of the second day he heard a slight movement in the tree near him. He managed to reach his gun and shoot a raccoon. But it was of no good to him; he could not even reach it.

Soon after this the captain heard a cry in the forest. He thought it must be an Indian device to discover his whereabouts, and lay still. But the call came nearer, and was unmistakably that of a white man. Captain Benham answered it, and John Watson appeared, one of the company's men who had eluded the Indians. Both of Watson's arms were broken by bullets.

A partnership was immediately formed, one providing hands, the other feet. When game appeared the captain would load and fire, while Watson would secure the prize by kicking it to his comrade. The captain cooked the food and fed Watson. The greatest difficulty was to get water. At last Benham took his skin cap and placed it in Watson's teeth. The latter then went into the river deep enough to fill the receptacle, and brought it back to the captain, who drank, and held the cap for Watson to satisfy his thirst.

Thus the two wounded men helped each other until they were able to travel a little. They reached a fork in the river, where they built a little hut and waited for a possible boat. One whole month they waited, and then a flatboat appeared. At first the party in the boat would not respond to the frantic appeals of the men because they feared some trick of the Indians. Finally they cautiously approached, and discovered the plight of the two almost helpless men, took them on board and cared for them.

Captain Benham lived to a good age, and his granddaughter married George Prentiss, the well-known writer and journalist.

BATTLEFIELD PERILS.

They have just laid to rest at Nottingham a Crimean veteran who was thrown down into a trench in the Crimea. Those who have made a study of the subject make the disquieting assertion that the burial of the quick with the dead upon the battlefield is not uncommon. A story is told of a surgeon who saw a "dead man come to life" after the battle of Borny. He saw the man go down, killed apparently by a bursting shell. At midnight the kindly heart of the doctor impelled him once more to make a round to see if any wounded lay still intended, and chance took him to the spot where the "dead" tirailleur lay. Blood was issuing from his nostrils, and the surgeon turned him over to see his wound. There was none. Concussion of the brain had caused inhibition of all the functions. The men who came out to bury were sent back to the hospital with this man, who six weeks hence was well enough to rejoin his regiment. But had not chance led that doctor to the spot, the soldier would have gone under the turf with the dead.

Sir Charles Napier fell grievously wounded at Corunna, and his comrades left him amid the heap of the slain. He was posted as killed. By a miracle, however, he was rescued before the burial party could do its work, then kept prisoner by Ney. After some months information was conveyed to the English lines that he was alive, and a man was sent home with the tidings to his mother. She dared not see him. "He comes," she said, "to tell me of the death of another son." Somehow the story of this stricken blind woman far away in England sorrowing for her son reached the ears of Ney. "Let him go," he said to Clouet, "and himself tell her that he is alive." The blind woman was the beautiful Sarah Lennox of old time who might have been the Queen of George the Second. The son lived to conquer Sind.—St. James' Gazette.

KILLS BULL WITH KNIFE.

James Clark is in a critical condition at his home in Sidney, Me., as a result of a desperate battle he had with a bull owned by him. Mr. Clarke suffered the fracture of one leg, his collar bone and several ribs, but succeeded in killing the animal and saving his own life.

Mr. Clark took the bull from the barn with the intention of watering him at the well in the yard, having the usual ring and leading pole with which to handle him. The animal pulled the pole out of Mr. Clark's hands and was master of the situation. Mr. Clark received serious injuries early in the battle, and it soon became a question of his life or that of the bull.

Mr. Clark succeeded several times in getting a grip on the ring in the animal's nose, but always lost his hold, though clinging to the infuriated beast as best he could and saving himself from being crushed.

For nearly a half hour the fight went on, the bull having the better of it, but never succeeding in quite finishing his victim. The pain of Mr. Clark's injuries was intense, and his clothing was saturated with blood from the wounds he received. His strength was beginning to fail, when he succeeded in getting a hold on the ring, and getting his jackknife from his pocket he cut the bull's throat.—New York Sun.

HOUSEHOLD AFFAIRS

KAFFEE-KUCHEN.

One pint of bread sponge; one tablespoonful of molasses; one teacup of sugar; one teacup of seeded raisins; one half teaspoonful of soda; one egg; butter the size of an egg. Spice to suit the taste. Flour to make as stiff as pound cake. Mix with spoon, let rise until light, and bake as bread.

SCOTCH TOAST.

Break the eggs into a small saucepan and beat up well with a spoon; season with pepper and salt and two tablespoonsfuls of butter. Toast the bread crisp and brown. Put the saucepan containing the eggs into another containing hot water, and when they are cooler turn them over the toast, which has been nicely buttered.

TURKEY IN CUPS.

Butter half a dozen teacups, sprinkle with bread crumbs, and fill them half way to the top with turkey meat chopped finely. Whip two eggs gently and season with one saltspoonful of salt, a pinch of pepper, a few drops of onion juice and a little finely chopped parsley. Now add one cupful of milk, and after mixing well pour into the cups holding the turkey. Set the cups in a pan of hot water, cover them over tightly and steam. As soon as the milk and eggs have become slightly stiff turn the turkey molds into slices of toast and serve accompanied by boiled rice.

TAPIOCA CREAM.

Soak two tablespoonsfuls of pearl tapioca in sweet milk to cover over night; or, if in a hurry, in hot water to cover in the top of the double boiler set on the back of the stove. When the water is absorbed, or in the morning, as the case may be, add a generous pint of boiling milk and cook until the tapioca is soft and transparent. Add the yolks of two beaten eggs, a half saltspoonful of salt and a scant half cup of sugar, and cook two or three moments only, until thickened like boiled custard. Flavor with vanilla or nutmeg, take from the fire and beat in the whites of the eggs already whipped to stiff foam. When cold place upon the ice to chill. A change is sometimes made by beating the whites of the eggs stiff, allowing a tablespoonful of sugar to each egg, then spreading over the top of the custard, which has been poured into the dish from which it is to be served. Set in a cool oven to make the meringue puff and become a delicate brown. Another nice way to fix the tapioca is after boiling to pour into individual moulds that have been well buttered, then bake in a moderate oven, the cups set in a pan of water like baked custards. When done spread over the top of each a small quantity of currant or other acid jelly, then cover with the meringue. Set back again in the pan and into the oven, which must be cool. If too hot leave the door open. Let the meringue rise slowly and color.

HINTS FOR THE HOUSEKEEPER

When making corn meal mush sift a tablespoonful of flour with the meal to prevent the mush sticking.

If boiled or roasted meat that is to be used cold is wrapped in a moist cloth it will be more tender.

In molding fancy jellies brush the inside of the mold with white of egg and the jelly will turn out easily.

Let the water in which cabbages have been boiled cool before throwing it down the sink. This will avoid an unpleasant smell in the kitchen.

When making gravy remove the pan from the fire while the thickening is being stirred in, and when smooth return to the fire to cook. This method prevents lumps forming.

To scale fish easily pour on hot water slowly till the scales curl, then sear quickly. Wash in several waters, having the last cold and well salted so no slime will be left.

The water from every kind of vegetable, except cabbage and potatoes, may be added to the stock-pot, since every vegetable imparts a certain amount of flavor to the water it is boiled in.

Cauliflowers should be turned flower downward to prevent any scum settling on the white portion. The water should always be skimmed when it comes to the boil after the vegetables have been put in. Green vegetables should always be cooked in boiling water and served very hot.

Potatoes will boil more quickly if two kettles of boiling water are prepared, one of which is poured over the vegetables, and after a moment the potatoes are lifted into the other kettle, and boiling will not cease. When potatoes are to be baked, if they are thoroughly heated on the top of the stove (turning them once) they will boil in half the usual time.

Spinach must be picked carefully from the stalks, and washed in several waters, so that all the dirt is thoroughly removed. Chop it slightly and put it in a saucepan without any water, pressing down as the moisture rises from the spinach. In about ten or fifteen minutes it should be tender enough to drain in a colander, when it should be pressed and returned to the saucepan with an ounce of butter. Pepper and salt to taste, and a squeeze of lemon. When thoroughly hot serve at once.

For nearly a half hour the fight went on, the bull having the better of it, but never succeeding in quite finishing his victim. The pain of Mr. Clark's injuries was intense, and his clothing was saturated with blood from the wounds he received. His strength was beginning to fail, when he succeeded in getting a hold on the ring, and getting his jackknife from his pocket he cut the bull's throat.—New York Sun.

Washington, Feb. 28.—After the agreement yesterday to vote on the statehood bill on March 9, the Indian settlement bill was taken up in the senate and Mr. Aldrich suggested that in view of the importance of the subject involved and the lack of information on the part of the senate, the whole matter should be deferred. He urged the adoption of the resolution, but Mr. Spooner objected and it went over until tomorrow.

The reading of the bill was proceeded with until the provision for the sale of the coal land in Indian Territory was reached, when Mr. Bailey took the floor. He expressed the opinion that the land should be had for the education of the Indian children, saying the income would be sufficient to give a university education to all the Indian children in the territory.

He thought this disposition would be preferable to permitting the lands to become the property of the railroad companies as they were likely to do. He quoted a recent decision of the supreme court to show that the roads carry their own coal more cheaply than they do those of other vendors.

Mr. Clark, (Mont.) moved to relieve the committee amendment, and Mr. La Follette proposed an amendment prohibiting railroads or the owners of railroad stock from acquiring the coal lands.

Mr. La Follette expressed the hope that Mr. Clark's motion would not prevail, and added the conviction that there were conditions in Indian Territory that should require affirmative legislation.

He announced his intention to later address the senate on the subject.

Mr. Clark spoke in support of his motion. He said if sold the lands would not bring their value and that the sale would afford opportunity for all kinds of commissions to gobble up the lands.

Without disposing of any of the motions or amendments the senate went into executive session and at 5:37 o'clock adjourned.

Stop Sales of Cider.

South McAlester, I. T., Feb. 28.—Pursuant to an order received from the Attorney General that the sale of all substitutes for intoxicating liquors be stopped, Marshal Pritchard last night began war against the cider joints.

The cider sold is usually a mixture made from acids and spiked with something hot and is a great favorite with the Indians when the genuine medicine cannot be obtained.

ON MARCH NINTH SENATE WILL VOTE ON STATEHOOD

Washington, Feb. 28.—The senate yesterday decided on Friday, March 9, as the date for voting on the statehood bill and all its amendments. Senator Foraker, of Ohio, who is in lead of the opposition to the omnibus statehood bill, stated that he had a small majority for his amendment to the bill which permits the people of Arizona and New Mexico to vote as to the kind of statehood they want. He claims the solid support of the democratic senators with the exception of one senator from Arkansas, and sixteen republicans.

Friends of the administration, without giving their names, assert that three of the senators claimed by Foraker and who were formerly counted as his supporters have voluntarily advised Senator Dick that since listening to his speech they have decided to line up for the omnibus bill.

"Say for me," said Senator Beveridge, "that we are going to make a state out of Oklahoma and the Indian Territory a week from Friday. I see no cause for the

FLATTERING SHOWING FOR TERRITORIES' LIVESTOCK

Guthrie, Ok., Feb. 27.—Figures have been arranged in the office of G. A. McNabb, secretary of the Oklahoma Board of Agriculture, in regard to the number of live stock in the two territories and the comparative values. In connection with these figures it is an interesting fact that there are only fifteen states in the Union that have a greater number of horses now within their border than Oklahoma.

In Oklahoma there are 412,772 horses, 87,373 mules, 192,892 milk cows, 1,387,161 other cattle, 57,240 sheep and 595,612 swine, making the total number of live animals in Oklahoma 2,731,480.

In Indian Territory there are 213,284 horses, 58,648 mules, 109,360 milk cows, 475,098 other cattle, 28,419 sheep and 751,352 swine, a total of 1,826,106.

The total value of the live stock in Indian Territory is $28,456,878 and in Oklahoma $63,163,788.

NEGRO'S BRUTAL ACT PRECIPITATES RACE RIOT

Springfield, Ohio, Feb. 28.—As the result of a shooting in the railroad yards yesterday in which M. M. Davis, a brakeman, was perhaps fatally wounded by two negroes, a general riot in "The Jingles," a locality inhabited by negroes, has resulted in the burning of 1,000 persons, against which the police are helpless and troops have been called for and are endeavoring to stop the trouble. A looted saloon afforded the results of intoxication, and a number of shots have been fired.

NEW BILLS CONCERNING THE CHICKASAW NATION

Washington, Feb. 23.—Delegate McGuire has introduced and had referred to the house Indian affairs committee a bill authorizing the governor of the Chickasaw Nation and the principal chief of the Choctaw Nation to execute and deliver to the Murrow Indian Orphans' home, a corporation of Atoka, I. T., certificates and patents for certain lots of lands for the use and occupancy of said home. He also introduced and had referred to the house judiciary committee an act establishing a United States court at Sulphur, I. T.

Delegate McGuire introduced a bill changing the corporation limits of Duncan, Chickasaw Nation, to conform to its exterior limits as segregated and approved by Secretary Hitchcock, March 4, 1902.

A Brilliant Tacky Affair.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard W. Simpson was the scene of a quaint, but most successful social function, Tuesday evening. It was a tacky party, and nobody "threw off" in the masquerade. To say that it was an orneriness looking aggregation would be putting it mildly. One would have thought it a reunion of the whole Hayes family.

Of the ladies, Miss McCoy was voted the prize winner, while among the reubs J. W. Byrd landed the squash. But Maupin Timberlake was a close second, and might have won if his Granger Twist had not given out—besides he had no fireplace to spit in.

The popular pastimes of the evening were the old Virginia reel and the square dance. Mr. Byrd led the bunch with his French harp, "Cotton-eyed Joe" being the prevailing discord. He wore his yellow, shallow-crowned derby throughout; it was so tight and so far down he couldn't get it off.

Mr. Foster Simpson and Miss Annie Carroll ably assisted in making it a brilliant tacky success. They dispensed striped candy, lemonade and popcorn with molasses to make it stick.

At a late hour, amid much rustic merriment, the fellers seen their darlings home.

The "Uno" Reform.

Vinita, I. T., Feb. 28.—The Uno reform for the Indian Territory that struck Muskogee some time ago has at last reached the Northern district of the Indian Territory. United States District Attorney Wade S. Stanfield swore out a warrant before United States Commissioner Thomas J. Fears, charging A. J. Michael with selling intoxicating liquor in the Indian Territory. Michael has been selling Uno in Vinita. Mr. Michael will proceed under a writ of habeas corpus in the United States court and will in this way bring the Uno question directly before the federal authorities for a decision as to whether it is intoxicating and contains enough alcohol to bring it under the ban prescribed by Mellette, at Muskogee. A great many people here will testify that they drank Uno and it never had any intoxicating effect upon them. The case will be an interesting one and its final outcome will be watched with interest.

Desiring some sausages the man who has a pronounced streak of obstinacy in his make-up, entered the place and asked for some "just like those in the window."

"I'm very sorry, but we haven't any of that kind in stock just now," said the delicatessen man.

"What's the matter with those in the window?" asked the customer. The delicatessen man started to say something about the sausages in the window not being just like the regular kind but his apparent unwillingness aroused the ire of the customer who began to insist that the sausages in the window be taken down at once and sold to him. Possibly he did not notice the smile of the delicatessen man as his request was complied with if he did he learned its meaning when his wife opened the package in the kitchen and discovered the sausages were made for window display solely and consisted of plaster of paris neatly painted.

The Reporter's Wrong.

When a newspaper reporter accosts a woman and begins to interview her, did you ever observe how quickly the accompanying husband, father or lover appears and butts in with a hostile look in his eye or an inquiry on his lips?

We refer to those folk, of whom there seem to be many, unfamiliar with the reporter's methods and prerogatives. Of course this animal instinct to protect the female against all apparent danger is not to be censured; yet it's a bother to a rushed reporter to have to pause and explain that he works for a newspaper, that he has to write things on his tab with his pencil so that there will be something to fill up the columns for people to read.

People have no idea how harmless is a reporter, at least while on duty. He scarcely takes time to observe whether a woman is plain or pretty. He simply regards every person as possible source of a news item. Then why shy at him?

SPORT AND ADVENTURE

EXPLORING THE GREAT ATLAS

A FATE similar to that which befell Mr. Perdier last year has recently overtaken a French explorer who endeavored to map the sources and the courses of the streams which flow from the Great Atlas Mountains, in Morocco, to the Atlantic and the Mediterranean. Monsieur De Segonzac has been captured by uncouth Arabs, and is being held for ransom.

The work which he had undertaken, and on which he had made great progress, was the filling in with exact details of one of the largest blanks on the map of Africa. Although several explorers have been through that region, little is known of the origin of the waters which come from it, of possible passes through the mountains, or more than a bare outline of the range itself. At the instigation of the French African committee Monsieur De Segonzac went thither last November, accompanied by Professor Gentil, a geologist of the Sorbonne, Monsieur De Flotte-Roquetaire, a cartographer, a Berber, and an Arab interpreter. They landed at Mogador, on the Atlantic coast, and there found it necessary to separate at once, in order not to attract too much attention. While the other two Frenchmen devoted themselves to the country round the City of Morocco, Monsieur De Segonzac set out for Grand Atlas.

From the first the progress was difficult. He found it necessary to conceal the fact that he was a Christian, yet this was unavoidable in order to have an escort, and the latter made his knowledge of the fact the ground for insolence and constantly increasing demands.

"Possession of my sect has made my servants my masters," the explorer wrote back in February.

The sheriffs of that region govern with very little regard to the Sultan of Morocco and maintain their authority in indefinitely bounded districts in a sort of feudal barony, robbing or protecting travelers as they choose. With some of them Monsieur De Segonzac became very friendly visiting at their villages and traveling under their protection. Others were jealous of his intrusion and made open threats of violence against him. Nevertheless, he made his way up the northwestern side of the Great Atlas to the Wady el Abid, and advanced up that valley carefully, determining the location of his camp by stellar observation every night, mapping his progress, and sending back notes geographical, geological and sociological as often as he could find trustworthy bearers.

He found at the head of the Wady el Abid a hitherto unknown pass of easy access through the chain to the head of the Wady Mouloua. Passing through this he saw at last the snow clad summit of the wonderful Jebel Aynshi, the highest peak of the Atlas, fourteen thousand six hundred feet above the sea. To this he had penetrated on an earlier trip from the other direction, so he turned southward again and worked from the Mouloua round to the Wady Sis and the Gbris, aiming toward Tafilet.

All of this way his notes were most complete, and he had entered into negotiations with many of the local sheriffs, which, he believed, would enable France to treat with them directly later for purposes of trade. At last, however, he was betrayed as a Christian to one of the under-sheriffs, who evidently saw in him a good investment seized him and carried him into captivity.

The Berber interpreter, whose connection with the affair is not entirely plain, revealed the state of affairs to the French African committee in a letter, in which they are assured that Monsieur De Segonzac is in good health, and if ransomed within a reasonable time will receive every courtesy. The other members of his party are quite safe at Morocco.

SAVED THEIR SCALPS.

Modern methods of locomotion offer many risks, but at least the traveler of to-day does not know what it is to journey in dread of the tomahawk. The danger of a misplaced switch cannot present itself with such insistent horror as did the ever-present possibility of the lurking enemy of the forest. The Magazine of American History gives an account of a thrilling experience which occurred in 1779.

In the fall of that year about seventy men, in two large boats, endeavored to make their way up the Mississippi from New Orleans toward Fort Blit with stores of provisions. At the mouth of the Little Miami the Indians attacked them. The white men noiselessly landed and tried to elude the enemy, but the savages seemed to spring out of the very ground. Nearly all the party were killed, although a few escaped into the forest.

During the slaughter Captain Benham, second in command, fell, pierced by a bullet. Although he felt confident his scalp was doomed, he lay perfectly still, putting off the evil moment as long as possible. In their eager pursuit the Indians passed him by. When he was sure they had gone, the captain painfully raised his head so he could better his hiding, for he knew the savages would be back for him. Near by was a newly fallen tree with unwithered foliage, with much anguish the wounded man managed to crawl into this shelter.

The next day, according to their custom, the Indians returned to strip and scalp their victims. The captain lay, expecting every moment to feel the cold edge of the tomahawk. The prospect of death by slow starvation did not seem half so terrible as that at the Indians' hands. When the savages had accomplished their task, they went off, leaving Benham undiscovered.

The captain's chance of life was poor. He had nothing to eat, nothing to drink, and the slightest movement caused him excruciating pain from his wound. On the evening of the second day he heard a slight movement in the tree near him. He managed to reach his gun and shoot a raccoon. But it was of no good to him, he could not even reach it.

Soon after this the captain heard a cry in the forest. He thought it must be an Indian device to discover his whereabouts, and lay still. But the call came nearer, and was unmistakably that of a white man. Captain Penham answered it, and John Watson appeared, one of the company's men who had eluded the Indians. Both of Watson's arms were broken by bullets.

A partnership was immediately formed, one providing hands, the other feet. When game appeared the captain would load and fire, while Watson would secure the prize by kicking it to his comrade. The captain cooked the food and fed Watson. The greatest difficulty was to get water. At last Benham took his skin cap and placed it in Watson's teeth. The latter then went into the river deep enough to fill the receptacle, and brought it back to the captain, who drank, and held the cap for Watson to satisfy his thirst.

Thus the two wounded men helped each other until they were able to travel a little. They reached a fork in the river, where they built a little hut and waited for a possible boat. One whole month they waited and then a flatboat appeared. At first the party in the boat would not respond to the frantic appeals of the men because they feared some trick of the Indians. Finally they cautiously approached, and discovered the plight of the two almost helpless men, took them on board and cared for them.

Captain Penham lived to a good age, and his granddaughter married George Prentiss, the well known writer and journalist.

BATTLEFIELD PERILS

They have just laid to rest at Nottingham a Crimean veteran who was thrown for dead into a trench in the Crimea. Those who have made a study of the subject make the disquieting assertion that the burial of the quick with the dead upon the battlefield is not uncommon. A story is told of a surgeon who saw a "dead man come to life" after the battle of Borny. He saw the man go down, killed apparently by bursting shell. At midnight the kindly heart of the doctor impelled him once more to make a round to see if any wounded lay still unattended, and chance took him to the spot where the "dead" lay still. Blood was issuing from his nostrils, and the surgeon turned him over to see his wound. There was none. Concussion of the brain had caused inhibition of all the functions. The man who came out to bury were sent back to the hospital with this man who six weeks hence was well enough to rejoin his regiment. But had not chance led that doctor to the spot the soldier would have gone under the tut with the dead.

Sir Charles Napier fell grievously wounded at Corunna, and his comrades left him amid the heap of the slain. He was posted as killed. By a miracle however, he was rescued before the burial party could do its work, then kept prisoner by Ney. After some months information was conveyed to the English lines that he was alive, and a man was sent home with the tidings to his mother. She dared not see him. "He comes," she said, "to tell me of the death of another son." Somehow the story of this stricken blind woman far away in England sorrowing for her son reached the ears of Ney. "Let him go," he said to Clouet, "and himself tell her that he is alive." The blind woman was the beautiful Sarah Lennox of old time who might have been the Queen of George the Second. The son lived to conquer Sind.—St. James' Gazette

KILLS BULL WITH KNIFE.

James Clark is in a critical condition at his home in Sidney, Me. as a result of a desperate battle he had with a bull owned by him. Mr. Clarke suffered the fracture of one leg, his collar bone and several ribs, but succeeded in killing the animal and saving his own life.

Mr. Clark took the bull from the barn with the intention of watering him at the well in the yard, having the usual ring and leading pole with which to handle him. The animal pulled the pole out of Mr. Clark's hands and was master of the situation. Mr. Clark received serious injuries early in the battle, and it soon became a question of his life or that of the bull.

Mr. Clark succeeded several times in getting a grip on the ring in the animal's nose, but always lost his hold, though clinging to the infuriated beast as best he could and saving himself from being crushed.

For nearly a half hour the fight went on, the bull having the better of it, but never succeeding in quite finishing his victim. The pain of Mr. Clark's injuries was intense, and his clothing was saturated with blood from the wounds he received. His strength was beginning to fail, when he succeeded in getting a hold on the ring, and getting his jackknife from his pocket he cut the bull's throat.—New York Sun.

HOUSEHOLD AFFAIRS

KAFERE-KUCHEN.

One pint of bread sponge; one tablespoonful of molasses; one teacup of sugar; one teacup of seeded raisins; one half teaspoonful of soda; one egg; butter the size of an egg. Spice to suit the taste. Flour to make as stiff as pound cake. Mix with spoon, let rise until light, and bake as bread.

SCOTCH TOAST.

Break the eggs into a small saucepan and beat up well with a spoon; season with pepper and salt and two tablespoonsfuls of butter. Toast the bread crisp and brown. Put the saucepan containing the eggs into another containing hot water, and when they are cooler turn them over the toast, which has been nicely buttered.

TURKEY IN CUPS.

Butter half a dozen teacups, sprinkle with bread crumbs, and fill them half way to the top with turkey meat chopped finely. Whip two eggs gently and season with one saltspoonful of salt, a pinch of pepper, a few drops of onion juice and a little finely chopped parsley. Now add one cupful of milk, and after mixing well pour into the cups holding the turkey. Set the cups in a pan of hot water, cover them over tightly and steam. As soon as the milk and eggs have become slightly stiff turn the turkey molds into slices of toast and serve accompanied by boiled rice.

TAPIOCA CREAM.

Sink two tablespoonsfuls of pearl tapioca in sweet milk to cover over night, or, if in a hurry, in hot water to cover in the top of the double boiler set on the back of the stove. When the water is absorbed, or in the morning, as the case may be, add a few drops of boiling milk, and cook until the tapioca is soft and transparent. Add the yolks of two beaten eggs, a half saltspoonful of salt and a scant half cup of sugar, and cook two or three moments only, until thickened like boiled custard. Flavor with vanilla or nutmeg, take from the fire and beat in the whites of the eggs already whipped to a stiff foam. When cold place upon the ice to chill. A change is sometimes made by beating the whites of the eggs stiff, allowing a table-spoonful of sugar to each egg, then spreading over the top of the custard, which has been poured into the dish from which it is to be served. Set in a cool oven to make the meringue pun and become a delicate brown. Another nice way to fix the tapioca is after boiling to pour into individual moulds that have been well buttered, then bake in a moderate oven, the cups set in a pan of water like baked custards. When done spread over the top of each a small quantity of custard or other jelly, then cover with the meringue. Set back again in the pan and into the oven, which must be cool. If too hot leave the door open. Let the meringue rise slowly and color.

HINTS FOR THE HOUSEKEEPER.

When making corn meal mush sift a tablespoonful of flour with the meal to prevent the mush sticking.

If boiled or roasted meat that is to be used cold is wrapped in a moist cloth it will be more tender.

In molding fancy jellies brush the inside of the mold with white of egg and the jelly will turn out easily.

Let the water in which cabbages have been boiled cool before throwing it down the sink. This will avoid an unpleasant smell in the kitchen.

When making gravy remove the pan from the fire while the thickening is being stirred in, and when smooth return to the fire to cook. This method prevents lumps forming.

To scale fish easily pour on hot water slowly till the scales curl, then scrape quickly. Wash in several waters, having the last cold and well salted so no slime will be left.

The water from every kind of vegetable, except cabbage and potatoes, may be added to the stock-pot, since every vegetable imparts a certain amount of flavor to the water it is boiled in.

Cauliflowers should be turned flower downward to prevent any scum settling on the white portion. The water should always be skimmed when it comes to the boil after the vegetables have been put in. Green vegetables should always be cooked in boiling water and served very hot.

Potatoes will boil more quickly if two kettles of boiling water are prepared, one of which is poured over the vegetables, and after a moment the potatoes are lifted into the other kettle, and boiling will not cease. When potatoes are to be baked, if they are thoroughly heated on the top of the stove (turning them once) they will bake in half the usual time.

Spinach must be picked carefully from the stalks, and washed in several waters, so that all the dirt is thoroughly removed. Chop it slightly and put it in a saucepan without any water, pressing down as the moisture rises from the spinach. In about ten or fifteen minutes it should be tender enough to drain in a colander, when it should be pressed and returned to the saucepan with an ounce of butter. Pepper and salt to taste, and a squeeze of lemon. When thoroughly hot serve at once.

ON MARCH NINTH SENATE WILL VOTE ON STATEHOOD

Washington, Feb. 28.—The pessimism that has prevailed on the subject." Against Stephens Bill.

Washington, Feb. 28.—Secretary Hitchcock today expressed determined opposition to the passage of the Stephens' bill, which would open to settlement 505,000 acres of land in the Kiowa, Comanche and Apache Indian reservations in Oklahoma. The bill has passed the House and last week was favorably reported to the Senate. It is believed that this action practically assures its passage despite the secretary's opposition.

Friends of the administration, without giving their names, assert that three of the senators claimed by Foraker and who were formerly counted as his supporters have voluntarily advised Senator Dick that since listening to his speech they have decided to line up for the omnibus bill.

"Say for me," said Senator Beveridge, "that we are going to make a state out of Oklahoma and the Indian Territory a week from Friday. I see no cause for the

NEW BILLS CONCERNING THE CHICKASAW NATION

Washington, Feb. 28.—Delegate McGuire has introduced and had referred to the house Indian affairs committee a bill authorizing the governor of the Chickasaw Nation and the principal chief of the Choctaw Nation to execute and deliver to the Murrow Indian Orphans' home, a corporation of Atoka, I. T., certificates and patents for certain lots of lands for the use and occupancy of said

Washington, Feb. 28.—After the agreement yesterday to vote on the statehood bill, on March 9 the Indian settlement bill was taken up in the senate and Mr. Aldrich suggested that in view of the importance of the subject involved and the lack of information on the part of the senate, the whole matter should be deferred. He urged the adoption of the resolution, but Mr. Spooner objected and it went over until tomorrow.

The reading of the bill was proceeded with until the provision for the sale of the coal land in Indian Territory was reached, when Mr. Bailey took the floor.

He expressed the opinion that the land should be held for the education of the Indian children, saying the income would be sufficient to give a university education to all the Indian children in the territory.

He thought this disposition would be preferable to permitting the lands to become the property of the railroad companies as they were likely to do. He quoted a recent decision of the supreme court to show that the roads carry their own load more heavily than they do those of other carriers.

Mr. Clark, (Neat.) moved to re- lieve the committee amendment, and Mr. La Follette proposed an amendment prohibiting railroads or the owners of railroad stock from acquiring the coal lands.

Mr. La Follette expressed the hope that Mr. Clark's motion would not prevail, and added the conviction that there were conditions in Indian Territory that should require affirmative legislation. He announced his intention to later address the senate on the subject.

Mr. Clark spoke in support of his motion. He said if sold the lands would not bring their value and that the sale would afford opportunity for all kinds of commissions to gobble up the lands.

Without disposing of any of the motions or amendments the senate went into executive session and at 5:37 o'clock adjourned.

Stop Sales of Cider.

South McAlester, I. T., Feb. 28.—Pursuant to an order received from the Attorney General that the sale of all substitutes for intoxicating liquors be stopped, Marshal Pritchard last night began war against the cider joints.

The cider sold is usually a mixture made from acids and spiked with something hot and is a great favorite with the Indians when the genuine medicine cannot be obtained.

FLATTERING SHOWING FOR TERRITORIES' LIVESTOCK

Guthrie, Ok., Feb. 27.—Figures have been arranged in the office of G. A. McNabb, secretary of the Oklahoma Board of Agriculture, in regard to the number of live stock in the two territories and the comparative values. In connection with these figures it is an interesting fact that there are only fifteen states in the Union that have a greater number of horses now within their border than Oklahoma.

In Oklahoma there are 412,772 horses, 87,378 mules, 192,892 milk cows, 1,387,161 other cattle, 57,240 sheep and 595,612 swine, making the total number of live animals in Oklahoma 2,731,480.

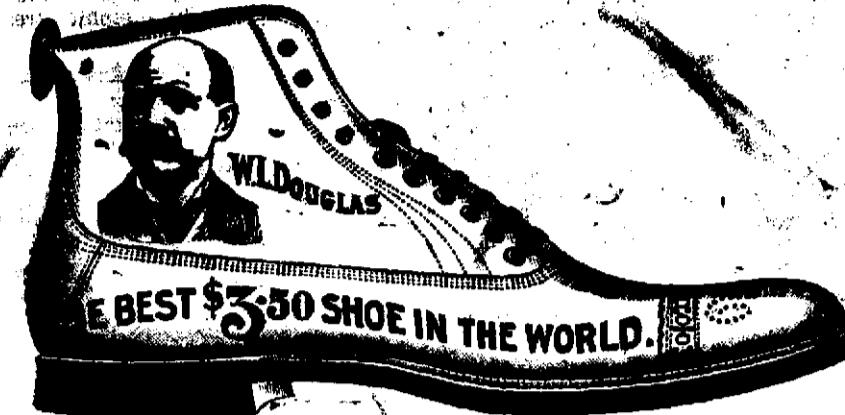

In Indian Territory there are 213,234 horses, 58,648 mules, 109,360 milk cows, 475,098 other cattle, 28,419 sheep and 751,352 swine, a total of 1,626,106.

The total value of the live stock in Indian Territory is $88,456,878 and in Oklahoma $63,163,788.

NEGRO'S BRUTAL ACT PRECIPITATES RACE RIOT

Springfield, Ohio, Feb. 28.—As the result of a shooting in the railroad yards yesterday in which M. M. Davis, a brakeman, was perhaps fatally wounded by two negroes, a general riot in "The Jungle," a locality inhabited by negroes, has resulted in the burning mob of 1,000 persons, against which the police are helpless and troops have been called for and are endeavoring to stop the trouble. A looted saloon afforded the results of intoxication, and a number of shots have been fired.

A Brilliant Tacky Affair.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard W. Simpson was the scene of a quaint, but most successful social function Tuesday evening. It was a "tacky party," and nobody "threw off" in the masquerade. To say that it was an ornery looking aggregation would be putting it mildly. One would have thought it a reunion of the whole Hayseed family.

Of the ladies, Miss McCoy was voted the prize winner, while among the reubs J. W. Byrd landed the squash. But Maupin Timberlake was a close second, and might have won if his Granger Twist had not given out—besides he had no fireplace to spit off.

The popular pastimes of the evening were the old Virginia reel and the square dance. Mr. Byrd led the bunch with his French harp, "Cotton-eyed Joe" being the prevailing discord. He wore his yellow, shallow-crowned derby throughout; it was on so tight and so far down he couldn't get it off.

Mr. Foster Simpson and Miss Annie Carroll ably assisted in making it a brilliant tacky success. They dispensed striped candy, lemonade and popcorn with molasses to make it stick.

At a late hour, amid much rustic merriment, the fellers seen their darlin' home.

The "Uno" Reform.

Vinita, I. T., Feb. 28.—The Uno reform for the Indian Territory that struck Muskogee some time ago has at last reached the Northern district of the Indian Territory. United States District Attorney Wade S. Stanfield swore out a warrant before United States Commissioner Thomas J. Fear, charging A. J. Michael with selling intoxicating liquor in the Indian Territory. Michael has been selling Uno in Vinita. Mr. Michael will proceed under a writ of habeas corpus in the United States court and will in this way bring the Uno question directly before the federal authorities for a decision as to whether it is intoxicating and contains enough alcohol to bring it under the ban prescribed by Mellette, at Muskogee. A great many people here will testify that they drank Uno and it never had any intoxicating effect upon them. The case will be an interesting one and its final outcome will be watched with interest.

An Oklahoma Statehood Pen

Oklahoma City, Ok., Feb. 28.—When Charlie Hunter, the newly appointed clerk of the district court here, was in Washington recently President Roosevelt promised to make him a present of a pen used in signing the statehood bill after its passage.

Mr. Hunter had made in this city a quill pen. The quill was taken from an eagle caught in Oklahoma and was presented to Mr. Hunter by Senator D. P. Marum of Woodward. The pen will be forwarded to Washington with the request that it be used in signing the statehood bill. When the pen is returned to Mr. Hunter he will present it to the Masonic consistory at Guthrie.

The Reporter's Wrong.

When a newspaper reporter accosts a woman and begins to interview her, did you ever observe how quick the accompanying husband, father or lover appears and butts in with a hostile look in his eye or an inquiry on his lips?

We refer to those folk, of whom there seem to be many, unfamiliar with the reporter's methods and prerogatives. Of course this animal instinct to protect the female against all apparent danger is not to be censured; yet it's a bother to a rushed reporter to have to pause and explain that he works for a newspaper, that he has to write things on his tab with his pencil so that there will be something to fill up the columns for people to read.

People have no idea how harmless a reporter, at least while on duty. He scarcely takes time to observe whether a woman is plain or pretty. He simply regards every person as a possible source of a news item. Then why shy at him?

GOT JUST WHAT HE WANTED

But the Obstinate Customer Relented When He Got Home

That things are not always what they seem was discovered by one of the patrons of a delicatessen store in a somewhat painful manner, relates the New York Globe. Desiring some sausages the man who has a pronounced streak of obstinacy in his make-up, entered the place and asked for some "just like those in the window."

"I'm sorry, but we haven't any of that kind in stock just now" said the delicatessen man.

"What's the matter with those in the window?" asked the customer. The delicatessen man started to say something about the sausages in the window not being just like the regular kind but his apparent unwillingness aroused the ire of the customer who began to insist that the sausages in the window be taken down at once and sold to him. Possibly he did not notice the smile of the delicatessen man as his request was complied with. If he did he learned its meaning when his wife opened the package in the kitchen and discovered the sausages were made for window display solely and consisted of plaster of paris neatly painted.

SPORT AND ADVENTURE

EXPLORING THE GREAT ATLAS.

A STORY similar to that which befell Mr. Perdier last year has recently overtaken a French explorer who endeavored to map the sources and the courses of the streams which flow from the Great Atlas Mountains, in Morocco, to the Atlantic and the Mediterranean. Monsieur De Segonzac has been captured by uncouth Arabs, and is being held for ransom.

The work which he had undertaken, and on which he had made great progress, was the filling in with exact details of one of the largest blanks on the map of Africa. Although several explorers have been through that region, little is known of the origin of the waters which come from it, of possible passes through the mountains, or more than a bare outline of the range itself. At the instigation of the French African committee, Monsieur De Segonzac went thither last November, accompanied by Professor Gentil, a geologist of the Sorbonne, Monsieur De Flotte-Rouqueval, a cartographer, a Berber, and an Arab interpreter. They landed at Mogador, on the Atlantic coast, and there found it necessary to separate at once, in order not to attract too much attention. While the other two Frenchmen devoted themselves to the country round the City of Morocco, Monsieur De Segonzac set out for Grand Atlas.

From the first the progress was difficult. He found it necessary to conceal the fact that he was a Christian, yet this was unavoidably known to his escort, and the latter made his knowledge of the fact the ground for insolence and constantly increasing demands.

"Possession of my secret has made my servants my masters," the explorer wrote back in February.

The sheriffs of that region govern with very little regard to the Sultan of Morocco, and maintain their authority in indefinitely bounded districts in a sort of feudal barony, robbing or protecting travelers as they choose. With some of them Monsieur De Segonzac became very friendly, visiting at their villages and traveling under their protection. Others were jealous of his intrusion and made open threats of violence against him. Nevertheless, he made his way up the northwesterly side of the Great Atlas to the Wady el Abid, and advanced up that valley carefully, determining the location of his camp by stellar observation every night, mapping his progress, and sending back notes geographical, geological and zoological as often as he could find trustworthy bearers.

He found at the head of the Wady el Abid a hitherto unknown pass of easy access through the chain to the head of the Wady Muluwa. Passing through this, he saw at last the snow-clad summit of the wonderful Jebel Ayashi, the highest peak of the Atlas, fourteen thousand six hundred feet above the sea. To this he had penetrated on an earlier trip from the other direction, so he turned southward again and worked from the Muluwa round to the Wady Sis and the Gheris, aiming toward Tafilet.

All of this way his notes were most complete, and he had entered into negotiations with many of the local sheriffs which, he believed, would enable France to treat with them directly later for purposes of trade. At last, however, he was betrayed as a Christian to one of the under-sheriffs, who evidently saw in him a good investment seized him and carried him into captivity.

The Berber interpreter, whose connection with the affair is not entirely plain, revealed the state of affairs to the French African committee in a letter, in which they are assured that Monsieur De Segonzac is in good health, and if ransomed within a reasonable time will receive every courtesy. The other members of his party are quite safe at Morocco.

SAVED THEIR SCALPS.

Modern methods of locomotion offer many risks, but at least the traveler of to-day does not know what it is to journey in dread of the tomahawk. The danger of a misplaced switch cannot present itself with such insistent horror as did the ever-present possibility of the lurking enemy of the forest. The Magazine of American History gives an account of a thrilling experience which occurred in 1770.

In the fall of that year about seventy men, in two large boats, endeavored to make their way up the Mississippi from New Orleans toward Fort Pitt with stores of provisions. At the mouth of the Little Miami the Indians attacked them. The white men noiselessly landed and tried to elude the enemy, but the savages seemed to spring out of the very ground. Nearly all the party were killed, although a few escaped into the forest.

During the slaughter Captain Benham, second in command, fell, pierced by a bullet. Although he felt confident his scalp was doomed, he lay perfectly still, putting off the critical moment as long as possible. In their eager pursuit the Indians passed him by. When he was sure they had gone, the captain painfully raised his head to see if he could better his bidding, for he knew the savages would be back for him. Near by was a newly fallen tree with unwithered foliage. With much anguish the wounded man managed to crawl into this shelter.

The next day, according to their custom, the Indians returned to strip and scalp their victims. The captain lay, expecting every moment to feel the cold edge of the tomahawk. The prospect of death by slow starvation did not seem half so terrible as that at the Indians' hands. When the savages had accomplished their task, they went off, leaving Benham undiscovered.

The captain's chance of life was poor. He had nothing to eat, nothing to drink, and the slightest movement caused him excruciating pain from his wound. On the evening of the second day he heard a slight movement in the tree near him. He managed to reach his gun and shoot a raccoon. But it was of no good to him, he could not even reach it.

Soon after this the captain heard a cry in the forest. He thought it must be an Indian device to discover his whereabouts, and lay still. But the call came nearer, and was unmistakably that of a white man. Captain Benham answered it, and John Watson appeared, one of the company's men who had eluded the Indians. Both of Watson's arms were broken by bullets.

A partnership was immediately formed, one providing hands, the other feet. When game appeared the captain would load and fire, while Watson would secure the prize by kicking it to his comrade. The captain cooked the food and fed Watson. The greatest difficulty was to get water. At last Benham took his skin cap and placed it in Watson's teeth. The latter then went into the river deep enough to fill the receptacle, and brought it back to the captain, who drank, and held the cup for Watson to satisfy his thirst.

Thus the two wounded men helped each other until they were able to travel a little. They reached a fort in the river, where they built a little hut and waited for a possible boat. One whole month they waited and then a flatboat appeared. At first the party in the boat would not respond to the frantic appeals of the men because they feared some trick of the Indians. Finally they cautiously approached, and discovered the plight of the two almost helpless men, took them on board and cared for them.

Captain Benham lived to a good age, and his granddaughter married George Prentiss, the well-known writer and journalist.

BATTLEFIELD PERILS.

They have just laid to rest at Nottingham a Crimean veteran who was thrown for dead into a trench in the Crimea. Those who have made a study of the subject make the disquieting assertion that the burial of the quick with the dead upon the battlefield is not uncommon. A story is told of a surgeon who saw a "dead man come to life" after the battle of Bornu. He saw the man go down, killed apparently by a bursting shell. At midnight the kindly heart of the doctor impelled him once more to make a round to see if any wounded lay still unattended, and chance took him to the spot where the "dead" lay still. Blood was issuing from his nostrils, and the surgeon turned him over to see his wound. There was none. Concussion of the brain had caused inhibition of all the functions. The men who came out to bury were sent back to the hospital with this man who six weeks hence was well enough to rejoin his regiment. But had not chance led that doctor to the spot the soldier would have gone under the turf with the dead.

Sir Charles Napier fell grievously wounded at Corunna, and his comrades left him amid the heap of the slain. He was posted as killed. By a miracle, however, he was rescued before the burial party could do its work, then kept prisoner by Ney. After some months information was conveyed to the English lines that he was alive, and a man was sent home with the tidings to his mother. She dared not see him. "He comes," she said, "to tell me of the death of another son." Somehow the story of this stricken blind woman far away in England sorrowing for her son reached the ears of Ney. "Let him go," he said to Clouet, "and himself tell her that he is alive." The blind woman was the beautiful Sarah Lennox of old time who might have been the Queen of George the Second. The son lived to conquer Sind.—St. James' Gazette.

KILLS BULL WITH KNIFE.

James Clark is in a critical condition at his home in Sidney, Me., as a result of a desperate battle he had with a bull owned by him. Mr. Clarke suffered the fracture of one leg, his collar bone and several ribs, but succeeded in killing the animal and saving his own life.

Mr. Clark took the bull from the barn with the intention of watering him at the well in the yard, having the usual ring and leading pole with which to handle him. The animal pulled the pole out of Mr. Clark's hands and was master of the situation. Mr. Clark received serious injuries early in the battle, and it soon became a question of his life or that of the bull.

Mr. Clark succeeded several times in getting a grip on the ring in the animal's nose, but always lost his hold, though clinging to the infuriated beast as best he could and saving himself from being crushed.

For nearly a half hour the fight went on, the bull having the better of it, but never succeeding in quite finishing his victim. The pain of Mr. Clark's injuries was intense, and his clothing was saturated with blood from the wounds he received. His strength was beginning to fail, when he succeeded in getting a hold on the ring, and getting his jackknife from his pocket he cut the bull's throat.—New York Sun.

HOUSEHOLD AFFAIRS

KAFFEE-KUCHEN.

One pint of bread sponge; one tablespoonful of molasses; one teacup of sugar; one teacup of seeded raisins; one half teaspoonful of soda; one egg; butter the size of an egg. Spice to suit the taste. Flour to make as stiff as pound cake. Mix with spoon, let rise until light, and bake as bread.

SCOTCH TOAST

Break the eggs into a small saucepan and beat up well with a spoon; season with pepper and salt and two tablespoonsfuls of butter. Toast the bread crisp and brown. Put the saucepan containing the eggs into another containing hot water, and when they are cooler turn them over the toast, which has been nicely buttered.

TURKEY IN CUPS

Butter half a dozen teacups, sprinkle with bread crumbs, and fill them half way to the top with turkey meat chopped finely. Whip two eggs gently and season with one tablespoonful of salt, a pinch of pepper, a few drops of onion juice and a little finely chopped parsley. Now add one cupful of milk, and after mixing well pour into the cups holding the turkey. Set the cups in a pan of hot water, cover them over tightly and steam. As soon as the milk and eggs have become slightly stiff turn the turkey mounds into slices of toast and serve accompanied by boiled rice.

TAPIOCA CREAM

Soak two tablespoonsfuls of pearl tapioca in sweet milk to cover over night, or, if in a hurry, in hot water to cover in the top of the double boiler set on the back of the stove. When the water is absorbed, or in the morning, as the case may be, add a generous pint of boiling milk and cook until the tapioca is soft and transparent. Add the yolks of two beaten eggs, a half salt spoonful of salt and a scant half cup of sugar, and cook two or three moments only, until thickened like boiled custard. Flavor with vanilla or nutmeg, take from the fire and beat in the whites of the eggs already whipped to a stiff foam. When cold place upon the feet to chill. A change is sometimes made by beating the whites of the eggs stiff, allowing a tablespoonful of sugar to each egg, then spreading over the top of the custard, which has been poured into the dish from which it is to be served. Set in a cool oven to make the meringue puff and become a delicate brown. Another nice way to fix the tapioca is after boiling to pour into individual moulds that have been well buttered, then bake in a moderate oven, the cups set in a pan of water like baked custards. When done spread over the top of each a small quantity of currant or other acid jelly, then cover with the meringue. Set back again in the pan and into the oven, which must be cool. If too hot leave the door open. Let the meringue rise slowly and color.

HINTS FOR THE HOUSEKEEPER

When making corn meal mush sift a tablespoonful of flour with the meal to prevent the mush sticking.

If boiled or toasted meat that is to be used cold is wrapped in a moist cloth it will be more tender.

In molding fancy jellies brush the inside of the mold with white of egg and the jelly will turn out easily.

Let the water in which cabbages have been boiled cool before throwing it down the sink. This will avoid an unpleasant smell in the kitchen.

When making gravy remove the pan from the fire while the thickening is being stirred in, and when smooth return to the fire to cook. This method prevents lumps forming.

To scale fish easily pour on hot water slowly till the scales curl, then scrape quickly. Wash in several waters, having the last cold and well salted so no slime will be left.

The water from every kind of vegetable, except cabbage and potatoes, may be added to the stock-pot, since every vegetable imparts a certain amount of flavor to the water it is boiled in.

Cauliflowers should be turned flower downward to prevent any scum settling on the white portion. The water should always be skimmed when it comes to the boil after the vegetables have been put in. Green vegetables should always be cooked in boiling water and served very hot.

Potatoes will boil more quickly if two kettles of boiling water are prepared, one of which is poured over the vegetables, and after a moment the potatoes are lifted into the other kettle, and boiling will not cease. When potatoes are to be baked, if they are thoroughly heated on the top of the stove (turning them once) they will bake in half the usual time.

Spinach must be picked carefully from the stalks, and washed in several waters, so that all the dirt is thoroughly removed. Chop it slightly and put it in a saucepan without any water, pressing down as the moisture rises from the spinach. In about ten or fifteen minutes it should be tender enough to drain in a colander, when it should be pressed and returned to the saucepan with an ounce of butter, Pepper and salt to taste, and a squeeze of lemon. When thoroughly hot serve at once.

HIS ALTERED WANTS.

"A month ago the Senator was hollering for a vindication."

"And now?"

"He'd like to have a new trial."

STRIVING TO PLEASE.

Guest—"What can you do, Alphonse, for a man who has no appetite?"

Walter—"Monsieur, we permit him to eat everything on the bill of fare. We can do no more, monsieur."

HE CERTAINLY DID.

"Just back from Europe, are you? Did you have a rough passage over?"

"Several of 'em. I had to lick the steward three or four times in order to get any attention at all"—Chicago Tribune.

CORRECTED.

Mrs. Oldrich—"I understand your husband is very influential."

Mrs. Newrich—"Dear me, no; he hasn't had any, since the time he had the grip three years ago."—New York Evening Sun.

ACTION OF GRAVITY.

"Senator, how did you get your start in life?" asked the reporter.

"I was born on a hillside farm in Vermont," said the eminent statesman, "and at an early age I rolled down."—Chicago Tribune.

SUSPICIOUS AGREEMENT.

"I guess your watch is wrong."

"What! My watch doesn't vary a quarter of a minute!"

"Well, I don't know how much it's out of the way, but your time is too blamed near mine to be right."

ACQUIRING KNOWLEDGE.

Mrs. Jenkins—"My son writes that he is at the head of his class at college."

Mrs. Jones—"Oh, the freshman class, isn't it?"

Mrs. Jenkins—"No. He calls it the 'water-weight'."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

HIS STRONG FACE.

"What a remarkably strong face young Buckland has."

"Yes. At the game the other day I saw two players jump right on it, but apparently neither of them succeeded in making the least impression."—Chicago Record Herald.

SUFFICIENT.

He—"Do you remember your old school friend?"

She—"Yes. A most absurd looking thing. So silly, too. What became of her?"

He—"I nothing. Only I married her."—New York Press.

TEMPORARILY SILENCED.

"Why did you insist on sending that young man to Congress?"

"Got tired of his speechmaking," answered Farmer Corntassel. "We thought we'd put him where the Speaker would keep him quiet for a few years."—Washington Star.

CAT!

Miss Angles—"While I was shopping to-day I happened to stop in front of one of those convex mirrors at Bargen & Co.'s. It was laughable, it made my figure look so ridiculous."

Miss Speitz—"Are you sure, dear, that it wasn't just an ordinary mirror?"—Catholic Standard and Times.

Mr. Staylate—"My! It's 10 o'clock. However, my train doesn't go till 11.10 and, it's very pleasant here."

Miss Subbubs—"I'm glad you like it."

Mr. Staylate—"Yes, but—er—perhaps I'm keeping you up?"

Miss Subbubs—"Not at all. I'm going to lock up and go to bed now."—Philadelphia Press.

STILL HAD A LITTLE PRIDE.

"What is this man charged with?" asked the police justice.

"Stealing a dog, your honor," said the officer.

"Well, sir, what have you got to say for yourself?"

"Your honor," answered the prisoner, drawing a grimy coat sleeve across his nose, "if you'll make it embarrasement I'll plead guilty. I may be a thief, but I've got feelin's."—Chicago Tribune.

HOT STUFF, THIS!

"I feel quite lost to-night. Forgot to bring my new glasses. Who is that overdressed woman by the piano?"

"Eh? That's my wife!"

"Beg pardon.
